MANY KINDS OF CHURCHMEN

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

I have been led to reflect upon the varieties of churchmen by the case of my friend, the late Dr. Lloyd Douglas in his transition from an orthodox Lutheran ministry to a very independent Congregationalist.

Douglas' father, after 25 years of building up a law practice, under the influence of a sudden, deep conversion left it all to become a circuit riding preacher on a salary of a few hundred dollars a year. He entered the ministry of the Lutheran body that year, and he turned him down for alleged unorthodoxy.

A man who made such obvious material sacrifice out of a religious conviction might well have found a measure of confidence, if not of admiration, among the religious, but Lloyd told me his father was tried twice for heresy.

I have wondered whether the memory of those heresy trials of his father may in later years have had anything to do with the sudden dramatic way in which Lloyd left the Lutheran body at the climax of his Lutheran ministry.

At a church convention, Douglas was asked to speak. It was announced that he was leaving the pastorate and the Lutheran ministry. From what Douglas told me the sudden outbreak was not premeditated. The announcement naturally caused a sensation, and when the late Dr. John R. Mott, YMCA leader, heard the news, he wired Douglas, offering him a position at the University of Illinois. From there Douglas went to the Congregational pastorate in Ann Arbor, Akron, and Los Angeles, to a Canadian pastorate in the famous St. James United (formerly Methodist) Church in Montreal and to the climax of his career as an author.

I am interested in changes, such as Douglas', that take place between Protestants and Roman Catholics. Conversions and changes from Protestant to Roman Catholic are more publicized, but the number of Protestant ministers that I have known

At the end of summer, it's easy to lose your freshness at the close of a busy day. Heat and humidity wilt a girl and if she has a date, it's important to regain the dewy look of morning. She begins (left) by washing away soil and make-up in the office powder room. A headband protects her hair and two towels, pinned at shoulder and waist, protect her dress from splashing. She applies fresh make-up, brushes out her hair and she's ready. Her beauty kit (center) takes up small space in her desk but holds everything she needs. She can carry it with her easily to the powder room. Her appearance on the job (right) is just as important to her as her looks on a date. She is neat, well-groomed and immaculate at all times.

Bride in Foreign Country Faces Hazards, Happiness

BRIDE IN FOREIGN COUNTRY FACES HAZARDS, HAPPINESS

By DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix: I spent the past school year at one of our leading universities doing graduate work. There I became very friendly with a charming young Italian, here on a fellowship. We dated, fell in love, and have discussed matrimonial plans. There are hurdles to be taken, of course. My mother is dead, my father remarried, and I have no other family ties. He, on the other hand, has lots of family and they have expressed pleasure at the news that their Tony has fallen in love with an American. However, they expect us to live in Italy and I had planned on making our home in America. Tony won't give a definite opinion about his desire. He says we'll marry, visit his folks, then make up our minds where our home will be.—Gloria

Dear Gloria: Don't start married life on anything as vague as a "well see" basis. Tony is undoubtedly determined to remain in his native land and you are equally set on staying in yours. Something has to give and you'd better make up your minds before the knot is tied. Unless you are a very well-adjusted, flexible young lady with a sense of adventure and a sense of humor, don't chance the marriage. Why not take an economy flight over to meet his folks, size up the living situation and see how you'd like it as a permanent arrangement? Since you have few ties here, you might find it very pleasant over there. You may not have a freezer or automatic washing machine but the warmth of a closely knit family could more than make up for housekeeping inconveniences. It's worth investigating, don't you think?

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have the misfortune of being prematurely bald and the kidding I get about it is ruining my life. I have no chance with girls because they think I'm much older than I am—and unattractive at that. With a full head of hair I could compete with the best of them but with my shining pate I'm the male equivalent of "wallflower."—Bruce C.

Dear Bruce: Who says women aren't smarter than men? When a lady is confronted with an act of nature that's displeasing, she does something about it. If she doesn't like the color of her hair, she changes it; if her tresses are sparse, she fills the gap with fake hair. Go thou and do likewise. An excellent wigmaker can be located through those very helpful yellow pages in the telephone book and he'll fix you up to be irresistible.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I really don't like this year.

Six of the cases were paralytic, the state Health Department said.

Claims Group to Set Amount of Playmates

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The state Claims Commission was expected to announce today amounts which would be paid families of 20 youths who died in a March 5 fire at the Negro Boys Industrial School at Wrightsville.

H. M. Friday, commission clerk, revealed yesterday that the commission had ruled negligence by state employees in the fire in which 51 boys died.

Families of 20 youths filed claims ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 each. No claim was filed in one death.

The pre-dawn fire destroyed a dormitory in which about 70 youths had been locked for the night. Most of the boys escaped by kicking out heavy wire screens on the windows.

L. R. Gaines, school superintendent, subsequently was fired.

Department Store Sales Fall Short

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Department store sales in the Eighth Federal Reserve District last week fell six per cent below the sales of the similar week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank reported today.

All reporting areas shared in the decline which centered in the Louisville area, where a drop of 12 per cent occurred.

versity, known to sports followers everywhere for the annual Drake Relays: the State Fairgrounds, glamorized by the novel and residential district. At once, unostentatious but luxurious, the homes on wooded, green-lawned estates, giving a substantial air and no sign of the "nouveau riche."

From early spring to late fall it seems like most of the people spend all their leisure time boating on the Des Moines River, which is filled with everything from canoes to cabin cruisers.

Your Magic Circle out of Des Moines to the rich and lush farming country "where the tall corn grows," leads (State 163) to a bit of Holland in America—Pella, city of tulips and boglagna. If you should happen here during the annual tulip festival, you'd rub your eyes; it is like being in a Dutch town along the Zuider Zee.

The clutter of wooden shoes is heard everywhere. Women wear starched white lace caps, light-bodied full-skirted dresses, snow-white aprons. Men appear in baggy bloomer-like pants, big brass buttons on their jackets and smoke long pipes. That's because in 1847, some 800 Hollanders emigrated here as a look at the telephone directory will attest.

Food Plus Art

After a breakfast of Balken Brij (the best scrapple), Beschuitdeeg (Holland biscuits) and Gedroogde Afbakken (dried apricots), we went to the Council Chamber of the City Office to see Just Des Moines' famous painting portraying the arrival of the colonists who, like the Pilgrims, left their homeland due to religious beliefs.

Rarely does the entrance vestibule or leave Pella without being loaded down with arms full of Bunkoff (Dutch pastry) long strings of vacuum-packed bologna and cans of Dutch chocolate.

Continuing on through the rolling green prairie and farm land (State 163) the next stop is Oskaloosa, named for a wife of a Seminole Indian. Settled originally by Quakers, it still has the quiet characteristics of that sect. They founded Penn College here and left their imprint on the town's dignity, stability and serenity.

Fun And Ponies

Today the community specializes in square dancing, annual festivals and raising prize Shetland ponies which sell for exceptional prices. Five miles east on State 92 is camping, swimming, boating, fishing.

The Magic Circle then turns north to the Criggingly named towns of What Cheer and South English. All through this area live the people Grant Wood portrayed in "American Gothic" and other pictures of Iowa. Reticent, taciturn, inclined to be clannish, these in their looks are as orderly and in their habits as are their forefathers. They won't vote, take political office, or bear arms (during both World Wars they took part in relief and reconstruction work).

Happy Land

Happiness is a way of life in Iowa, and it is most apparent in the Amiana Colony towns, part of another religious group. Amiana or will be intrigued by these seven prosperous and unique colonies, is the life pattern of these farmers in their clothes, homes, habits and religion. They won't vote, take political office, or bear arms (during both World Wars they took part in relief and reconstruction work).

Final stop before completing your tour is at Newton, known as a pioneer of the manufacture of electric washing machines (Maytag). The Maytag Dury have faithfully "be" for almost 75 years place for those interested in price church brotherhood with "common procedures."

Board Hears Appeal Over Assignment

LITTLE ROCK (E)—The Little Rock School Board last night heard the first appeal by a Negro pupil from re-assignment to a white high school.

The Board took no action on the request by James Franklin Henderson Jr. 16, for transfer from all-Negro Horace Mann High to Central High, where two Negro pupils are now attending classes.

The Board also took under consideration several appeals by white students for re-assignment.

Three Negro girls are attending Central High, the second high school to be integrated this year. A third Negro was assigned to Central but is not attending because she has completed her preparation for college.

Henderson told the Board he has been attending classes at Mann since school opened Aug. 12. Some of the 17 other Negroes who appealed their assignment to Central have been boycotting the school.

The Board is to hear a second Negro's reassignment request Friday. Hearings on the others are scheduled Sept. 8-9. The Board has said the other 16 Negroes have not fulfilled requirements of the pupil placement laws either by not attending classes or by failing to file proper affidavits. Several white students also have not fulfilled these requirements.

Henderson said he had attended an all-white school in Connecticut last year, when Little Rock high schools were closed. He said he had no trouble there. The youth said he thought Central would offer him "more variety of subjects."

After the re-assignment hearings, the Board directed Sup. Terrell Powell to apply to the North Central Assn. of Colleges and Secondary Schools for re-accreditation of Central, Mann and High Schools. They lost accreditation last year when they were closed.

Powell also was instructed to seek accreditation for Technical High School, which has not been accredited by the NCA in the past.

Seven New Polio Cases in State

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Seven new polio cases reported today boosted the state's total to 183.

estate and property." The elders reorganized and separated the church and village activities in 1832; family homes were allotted instead of community houses and kitchens.

Like Rhineland

Their houses are reminiscent of the Rhineland in Germany, with neat gardens and the bright, old-fashioned flower beds of hollyhocks, zinnias, four o'clocks and bachelor buttons.

Visitors are always welcome at their busy industrial plants. Best known for the manufacture of freezers and refrigerators, they also operate a furniture factory, woolen mills, bakery and a spotless dairy.

And if you love to eat, choose this kind of lunch at one of the restaurants: sauerkraut and wiener, chicken and noodles, Wiener Kuchlen—a hot and with cream—that could be cut with a knife. We left loaded down with Westphalian smoked ham, bacon and crumpets and home-baked bread.

There is a change of pace when you visit the campus of Grinnell College, founded before the Civil War by Josiah Grinnell, an ardent abolitionist who helped John Brown maintain the underground railroad.

Final stop before completing your tour is at Newton, known as a pioneer of the manufacture of electric washing machines (Maytag). The Maytag Dury have faithfully "be" for almost 75 years place for those interested in price church brotherhood with "common procedures."

shall receive his own reward, according to his own labour; for we are labourers together with God." Those lines from Corinthians, might well be the inspiration for the holiday America observes... a special day set aside to pay respect to those who labor to make our nation great and, consequently, keep it free. This is Labor Day... when each man and woman whose work helps keep the bulwark of Democracy strong, receives "his own reward" in the satisfaction of a job well done. It is not just another day for looking back on past accomplishment—this Labor Day. In a strange new scientific world which taxes comprehension, it is a time for looking ahead... for rededicating ourselves. We must need those Corinthian lines which asks us all to be "labourers together with God."
